Cultural shock: It may comfort you to know that no individual is immune to "culture shock". Culture shock, simply, is an uneasy feeling of disorientation brought on by the inability to respond appropriately to the social cues of another country which you may be introduced to in daily life situations. How to act?

There are many things you can do in order to adapt yourself into the new culture. But remember you are not alone, there are many people who can help you: Family and friends, teachers, new friends. Having not newcomer friends will help you to understand a little better the new culture and to have someone you can talk with when you feel sad.

Be open to new ways of thinking and doing things.

Identify the things that are equal and which ones are different, and keep on mind that variety is what makes people so interesting.

Learning techniques:

1. At the beginning, and to improve your confidence, it is better to memorize basic words, phrases and survival questions. Memorize phrases for key situations.
2. Encourage yourself to talk, to overcome your fears because the more you talk, the more you will advance in Spanish.
3. Invest your time, academic and rational effort in learning, but also emotional efforts: meet people, get in touch with the Spanish-speaking community. Try joining groups, do language exchanges.
4. Immerse yourself in the language: try to read, listen, speak and think in Spanish
5. Subscribe to web pages and apps. for learning or practicing Spanish.
6. Read aloud, even making mistakes. Read books, newspapers, blogs ... about topics that are interesting for you.
7. Try to understand what you read for the first time, without translating word for word.
8. Speak alone while you are doing everyday tasks, this will help you to think in Spanish.
9. Look out the window, look at pictures or the TV and describe everything you can see.
10. Try not to focus on mistakes to gain fluency, but if you want to correct mistakes, record while you are speaking and listen to the recording with an observing eye.
11. Speak with natives and your teachers to confirm, to keep in perspective that what you are learning is correct.
12. Write down the new vocabulary, review the new words and establish a number of words to learn each week. Increase that number progressively over time.

13. Make vocabulary lists. Place the new word in a group along with other words that are somehow similar (clothes, colours ...) or make mental maps. Make a list of all the words you know that have some relation to the new one and draw lines to show the interrelationships.
14. Associate the sound of the new word with the sound of a familiar word.
15. Repeat or write down the word you want to learn many times.
16. Use flash cards on which to write the new word on one part and the definition or other information on the other.
17. Learn the vocabulary in context, do not write INTERESTED, but BE INTERESTED IN SOMETHING
18. Write meaningful sentences about yourself using that vocabulary without putting the translation in your language. For example: I AM INTERESTED IN ECOLOGY.
19. Remember the word by making a mental image or drawing it. Visualize mentally how the word is written. You can also use a rhyme.
20. Use the dictionary to help yourself to understand what you are learning.
21. Listen to the radio or podcast in Spanish: Cadena SER, RNE etc.
22. Watch the news on TV. Use the websites of the different channels to see the programs as many times as you want.
23. Practice frequently new expressions. You can say them or write them.
24. Try to imitate the natives' way of speaking.
25. Practice the sounds that are difficult.
26. Write notes, letters, messages in Spanish
27. Check what you have written to improve your writing.
28. Take notes in Spanish during the lessons
29. Make summaries of what you have been learning in class.
30. Use the language in new situations, applying the rules already known, but also look for opportunities to practice the new words, expressions or rules that you have learned.
31. Look for similarities and differences between Spanish and your own language.
32. Develop your own explanations about the Spanish language system and revise them when you have new information.

Levels' progression:

Library: You are welcome to use our library with more than 400 books and any of our teachers can help you which book to read according with your level of Spanish. You can borrow books, magazines, music and films or stay and use manuals, grammars etc.

Linguistic exchanges with Spaniards:

it is just two people who agree to get together to practice each other's languages. You find someone who speaks Spanish, and who's learning the language that you speak and then you talk to each other! We will help you to meet people interested in doing linguistic exchanges with you.

Methodology: Do you know what the Fun Theory is? We do not need a specialist to know that if we like something we will learn faster and easier. It is clear that motivation is crucial to making anything that is difficult easy. Anything that requires dedication and perseverance such a learning a language can be transformed into fun and games to make it interesting not a chore.

Positive reinforcement motivates us to go ahead hence in Colegio Internacional Alicante we have used it as the basis of our methodology.

If you add to all together plus the experience of our teachers in the communicative methodology, objectives and most important teamwork that we use in teaching Spanish and also a deep knowledge of the Spanish grammar, you will understand why our students enjoy all of our lessons, and why laughter and smiles are fundamentals that define us, even in our logo. Always, of course, with a clear goal: you will live, feel and speak Spanish from the very first day.

Furthermore, our methodology would not make sense if we did not put the student at the centre of the teaching-learning process. We must find, reach and capture each of the multiple intelligences that characterize us as individuals. In our school, all ways of learning are happening during our lessons. This way, none of the intelligences of our students will be lost. You will find exercises which have: movement (for the bodily students), songs (for musical once), individual work (for intrapersonal students), interactive groups (for verbal and social once); where we will deduce and analyse rationally (for logical); we will imagine from pictures and even leap out of the classroom to be in contact with the natural environment (for naturalistic learners)

According to experts, we all have 8 types of intelligences, but each of us tends to have a more developed one than others, which naturally influences the way we learn.

Classrooms are perfect equipped and air-conditioned. We are located within the centre of the town, within the main shopping area, 2 minutes to the sea and a few minutes from the historic sights. All the teachers are University Graduates with many years of teaching experience. Our small classes and the familiar way the teachers interact with the students create a friendly, dynamic and young atmosphere.

Private tuition or specialised Business Spanish is also available for students who do not wish to pursue a normal group course.

On the other hand, we are able to design a "tailor-made" course to fit student's specific needs.

Our School is located right in front of Plaza Séneca 3.750 m2 park.

Self-learning: Ten tips for learning a language

1. Know your motivation

This might sound obvious, but if you don't have a good reason to learn a language, you are less likely to stay motivated over the long-run.

2. Find a partner

Finding some kind of partner will push both of you to always try just a little bit harder and stay with it.

3. Talk to yourself

When you have no one else to speak to, there's nothing wrong with talking to yourself in a foreign language.

4. Keep it relevant

If you make conversation a goal from the beginning, you're less likely to get lost in textbooks. Talking to people is one of the best ways to learn a language, because it keeps the learning process relevant to you.

5. Have fun with it

Using your new language in any way is a creative act. Think of some fun ways to practice your new language: make a radio play with a friend, draw a comic strip, write a poem or simply talk to whomever you can.

6. Act like a child

Try learning the way kids do. We learn by making mistakes. As kids, we are expected to make mistakes, but as adults, mistakes become taboo. When it comes to learning a language, admitting that you don't know everything (and being okay with that) is the key to growth and freedom. Let go of your grown-up inhibitions!

7. Leave your comfort zone

Willingness to make mistakes means being ready to put yourself in potentially embarrassing situations. This can be scary, but it's the only way to develop and improve. No matter how much you learn, you won't ever speak a language without putting yourself out there: talk to strangers in the language, ask for directions, order food, try to tell a joke. The more often you do this, the bigger your comfort zone becomes and the more at ease you can be in new situations.

8. Listen

You must learn to listen before you can speak. Every language sounds strange the first time you hear it, but the more you expose yourself to it the more familiar it becomes, and the easier it is to speak it properly.

9. Watch others talk

Different languages make different demands on your tongue, lips and throat. Pronunciation is just as much physical as it is mental:

If you can't watch and imitate a native-speaker in person, watching foreign-language films and TV is a good substitute.

10. Dive in

It's crucial to practice your new language every single day and immerse yourself in the new language.

Remember, the best possible outcome of speaking a language is for people to speak back to you. Being able to have a simple conversation is a huge reward in itself. Reaching milestones like that early on will make it easier to stay motivated and keep practicing. And don't worry, you won't annoy people by speaking their language poorly. If you preface any interaction with, "I'm learning and I'd like to practice..." most people will be patient.
